Rows of Dead Grow Longer
Each Hour; May Reach
Total of 2,000

THOUSANDS INJURED

Workers Face Difficulties As Water and Light Supplies Lessen

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 6.—(INS)—In a famished and thirsty city ravaged by a hurricane which Wednesday skeletonized almost 10,000 homes, relief workers pursued a morbid task today of dragging bodies from the tumbled ruins and consigning them to funeral pyres in an effort to prevent a fearful epidemic.

Hour by hour the rows of bodies lengthened, establishing a growing conviction that the final number of dead in the worst Caribbean catastrophe in recent years would reach 2,000. Semiofficial counts estimated that between 1,000 and 1,400 bodies already had been recovered, with many collapsed structures as yet unsearched.

Attempts to actually count the endless parade of injured given emergency medical treatment since Wednesday proved futile, but tentative figures ranged between 4,000 and 3,000. The disaster, from first reports, concentrated itself in the capital, but it was believed some damage and loss of life occurred also in the inland provinces.

Faced with extreme difficulties and crippled water and light supply, President Rafael L. Trujillo ordered establishment of martial law in the city to prevent looting. Rolling kitchens and the parcelling out of rations to pitiful lines of distracted men, women and children vividly recalled early war days in Belgium and northern France, where refugees and prisoners crowded relief stations for meagre allotments of bread and potato soup.

Squads of constabulary and citizen volunteers aided the army in maintaining order and refraining from those who besieged rescue squads from interfering with their task in order to identify the bodies of the victims as they were pulled from the ruins.

Various relief expeditions from Porto Rico and elsewhere were scheduled to arrive today with food, tenting and clothing as well as medical supplies and doctors. First relief reached the city yesterday when airplanes from the U. S. Marine station at Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, arrived with the most urgently needed medical supplies. Local authorities have valiantly striven to alleviate the suffering of the most seriously injured but hundreds awaited further assistance.

The dread spectre of epidemic hovered auspiciously in the background, causing authorities to redouble efforts to prevent inception of disease through the stricken area. As a drastic preventive step, the safety committee appointed by President Trujillo to guard public health ordered quick disposal of all bodies so far recovered. Burial was out of question. Instead, huge funeral pyres were built and throughout the night the flames reached into the sky.

Interested Watchers Lose Beer Which Was Hidden

ANDALUSIA, Sept. 6.—A large truck loaded with barrels of alleged high-powered beer, was damaged somewhat here Thursday afternoon, when it struck a pole at the side of the highway.

The barrels of beverage were quickly rolled to a nearby field and woods, where several parties who became interested thought they would be able to hide same for a time.

The cargo was later taken in charge by Constable Harry Oliver, Andalusia, until revenue officers arrived from Philadelphia, to take over the consignment.

SOMERTON-TREVOSE ROAD LINK OPENED

First of Chain to Girdle City and Relieve Congestion of Traffic

HOLD A CELEBRATION

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—One of the first links in the chain of highways which some day will girdle the city and aid in the solution of the central city traffic problem, was formally opened yesterday in Northeast Philadelphia.

Representatives of the Reading Railroad, of the Tri-State Regional Planning Association and of the City of Philadelphia officiated at the presentation of the mile and a half strip of new road, connecting Bustleton pike, Somerton, with Street road in Trevoise.

The highway has been built through the efforts of the Reading Company at an approximate cost of $80,000, on land surrendered by citizens of the Thirty-fifth ward and of Lower Southampton township in Bucks county. The road is an extension of Philmont avenue, recently built by the City of Philadelphia, and provides a short and direct route from Trevoise by way of Somerton to Willow Grove, Hatboro, Jenkintown, Chestnut Hill and points in Delaware, Montgomery and Chester counties.

Colorful Parade Marks Opening
A large portion of the population of Somerton and Trevoise was on hand to see the bands of red, white and blue ribbon across either end of the new strip of thoroughfare officially cut, under the direction of Herbert L. Badger, vice-president of the Regional Planning Federation of the Philadelphia Tri-State District.

Mr. Badger was assisted in the ceremonies by William Thatcher, representing Mayor Mackey; Clark Dillingham, chief engineer of the Reading Company, and J. V. Hare, secretary of the Reading Company, who later took charge of the official presentation of the road to the residents of the district.

A parade, headed by these officials, was formed at Somerton. A group of youngsters walked along in front of the automobiles and strewed the road with flowers. Among the children participating was 5-year-old Isabel Ewing, granddaughter of Charles H. Ewing, vice-president of the Reading Company, and Jean Warner, daughter of William R. Warner, prominent merchant of Trevoise. Other youngsters acting as flower girls were Jean Sichel, Bernice Doelling, Barbara Haller, Laura Booth, Louise Michener, Dotty Barnard, Alice Martin, Nancy Hare, Elinor Van Horn and Grace Van Horn.

Old Grade Crossing Nailed Up

The first stop along the new road by the procession of gayly decorated cars was at one of two old grade crossings which the new highway will eliminate. Mr. Badger and Mr. Thatcher got out to nail a board over the grade crossing at Sterner's road.

The party finally ended up at Trevoise Community House, where Mr. Badger pointed out the part which the new road eventually will play in the belt line highways now being planned for Philadelphia. He indicated that the opening of highways all around Philadelphia will be of vital importance to the development of the city's industrial and residential sections.

He stated that 30 per cent. of the traffic now passing through central Philadelphia from other cities eventually can be carried around the city and thus greatly decrease congestion in the heart of Philadelphia.

TO DEDICATE HOSPITAL

The dedication of the Quakertown Community hospital will take place Sunday, October 12th, at 3 p. m. Distinguished speakers will be present on this occasion and prominent visitors from other cities will be invited to inspect the hospital.

LIQUOR CACHE FOUND ON ROOF OF HOTEL

State Police Catch Men in Act of Lowering Moonshine
From Roof

ARREST PROPRIETOR

KINTNERSVILLE, Sept. 6.—State Police yesterday discovered a secret moonshine liquor cache in the roof of the notorious Narrows Hotel on the River Road south of here. Whether liquor was being made in the building and shipped out, or whether it was received for storage there, has not been ascertained.

Corporal William Francis and Private Peter Greblunas, of the Doylestown sub-station of State Police, were doing patrol duty along the River Road about 3 o'clock yesterday morning when they noticed some confusion in the rear of the Narrows Hotel that had been raided on two previous occasions during the past five months by the State Police.

An investigation disclosed a rope and pulley attached to the roof of the hotel. On the ground outside of the building the officers found three 25-gallon barrels of alleged moonshine whiskey. On the roof of the building was located a trap door large enough to receive small barrels. Hidden under the roof of the barn the officers found three more 25 gallon barrels of liquor.

On the second floor of the building, Joseph Teley, of Bethlehem, the alleged proprietor of the place, was found by the officers. Teley was placed under arrest and taken to Doylestown for a hearing before Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack. At the present time Teley is listed for trial at the criminal term of court next week in Doylestown on a liquor law violation charge.

Teley told Corporal Francis that he was moving the liquor out of the building and was not in the act of receiving it.

Two Hurt in Crash; Seek Hit-Run Driver

One man is in the Grand View Hospital, Sellersville, and another is suffering minor cuts and bruises, as a result of an accident caused by a hit-run driver on the Bethlehem pike yesterday, near Montgomeryville.

The injured man is Charles Hoffman, of Telford, who is being held at the hospital for observation. He has no broken bones, but it is feared that he may have a concussion or possible internal injuries.

Gustave L. Bennett, of Perkasie, whose car struck Hoffman's after it had been forced across the road by the hit-runner, is also suffering minor bruises requiring the treatment of a physician.

The accident took place when a car, said to have a New Jersey license, was proceeding south on the Bethlehem pike shortly before 7 o'clock. At a point, near Montgomeryville, the auto which witnesses say was going at a high rate of speed, was forced to swerve across the road to avoid a truck which was standing not far past a curve in the highway.

Hoffman, proceeding north on the pike, met the New Jersey car just as it swerved, and the driver was unable to stop or swerve back to the right side of the road. He side-swiped Hoffman's car, forcing it into the ditch, and continued down the pike.

As Hoffman swerved his car abruptly and got back on the road, a third car, driven by Bennett, was coming south, and crashed into Hoffman.

Both cars were badly damaged, and the drivers injured, while the car which is said to have been the cause of the crash, escaped with little or no damage.

State highway patrolmen are seeking the driver of the hit-run car.

"BLUE GRASS" LANDS ATTRACT TOURISTS

Throngs of Visitors Annually
Visit the Various Points of Interest

HIGHWAYS ARE GOOD

In the "Blue Grass" lands of Old Kentucky are numerous vacation havens that attract throngs of visitors annually. None of the points of interest in this southland summer playground section however, excels the famous Mammoth Cave which is classed as one of the world's greatest subterranean wonders.

Over a network of excellent main trunk motor highways that lead through the mountains of West Virginia and into Kentucky, the Keystone Automobile Club has mapped an interesting tour to this delightful region.

"The mountains of West Virginia are noted for picturesque scenery while the smiling Blue Grass regions of Kentucky present ever changing vistas free from monotony on every hand," says Russell B. Cart, representative of the club, "Mammoth Cave, the objective of the trip is approximately 650 miles from Bristol. The return trip can be made back over the same highways or the travelers can take advantage of wonderful highways traversing the delightful rural sections of Indiana and Ohio on the homeward journey. The distance over this route would be 980 miles.

From Bristol the tour leads over the Lincoln Highway passing through Paoli, Downingtown, Coatesville, Lancaster, Columbia, York and Gettysburg to Chambersburg. Here a left turn into U. S. Route 11 leads south through Greencastle to historic Hagerstown.

From Hagerstown U. S. Route 40 is followed to Cumberland where a left turn made into U. S. Route 220 carries the travelers to New Creek where U. S. Route 50 is met and followed through the lower Alleghenies to Parkersburg, W. Va. Here a left turn into U. S. Route 21 carries the tourists to the state capital at Charleston. From this point National Route 60 is used through Huntington and across the Big Sandy River to Ashland, Ky., lying amid scenic grandeur of the famous "Blue Grass" regions. Olive Hill and Mount Sterling are passed enroute to Lexington, the center of the vast horse breeding districts of the south.

Through Versailles the route leads into Frankfort, capital city of the Blue Grass State, and then westward through Shelbyville to Louisville another outstanding city of the old southland. From this point U. S. Route 31 is followed southward to the cavern country. At Elizabethtown an interesting side trip can be taken to Hodgenville, the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln. Returning to Elizabethtown the travelers follow U. S. Route 311 southward to Cave City where a right turn into state route 65 leads to Mammoth Cave.

Through this subterranean world runs Echo River 360 feet below the surface and a ride along this stream for almost a mile in flatboats is a unique experience. As its name implies the river is a vast resonator, its branching avenues and limestone roof serving as a reflector for ever sound intensified many times. Other attractions are a bottomless pit, the Bridge of Sighs and scores of stone formations sculptured by nature in the form of catacombs, buildings and other interesting exhibits.

To return through Indiana and Ohio U. S. Route 31 is used back through Louisville where the Ohio River is crossed to New Albany. Northward this highway leads to Indianapolis. Here a right turn leads eastward through Dayton, Springfield, Columbus, Zanesville, Wheeling, Washington, Pa., to Greensburg. From this point U. S. Route 30 carries the tourists back to Chambersburg where the tour can be finished over the same highways on which the journey started.

CITIES IN DEBT

Two hundred cities in the United States, studied as regards their bonded indebtedness, increased their combined indebtedness by $368,000,000 last year. Eighty-four of that number reduced their obligations by $39,000,000, which means the increase was apportioned among 116 municipalities.

The great increase, of course, reflects increased activity in public works, most of them indispensable, all of them desired by the public.

Among these 200 cities there are some dangerously near the border line of insolvency. Chicago was one to pass over that line. That means that a prolonged business depression cutting deeply into municipal revenues through unemployment and impaired realty values might make it impossible for others to meet their obligations.

It seems like poor management for a city to borrow up to its peak revenue, which means bankruptcy in the event of any material drop, but that seems to be the kind of stewardship city taxpayers prefer. Few costly public improvements are made without the pressure of public opinion behind them.

There is probably not a city in this or any other country that could not effect material economies without detracting from its livability, but these possible savings do not make taxes high. Responsibility for that rests upon the insatiable thirst of American cities for better streets and sewers, improved water systems, public buildings and parks, stadiums, playgrounds and bathing beaches.

"DON'T DO IT"

"Truthful advertising has one of its greatest allies and servants in the Federal Trade Commission."

That is the modest verdict of the commission on itself.

It is arrived at, apparently, by tabulating the large number of "moral victories" the commission is winning over purveyors of false advertisements.

These victories are won in this manner: The circulator of false advertising agrees not to do it any more. The commission agrees not to disclose his identity if he keeps his promise. There's handshaking all around and the scorekeeper chalks up a victory for righteousness.

It is much the same as though a chief of police should announce that he is one of the greatest promoters of law and order because he has freed confessed criminals on their promise to commit no more crimes. Such an arrangement would be what the Federal Trade Commission calls a "stipulation."

This may be the bureaucrat's idea of a moral victory, but it is doubtful that the commission's plan of action has the deterrent effect necessary if dishonest advertising is to be abolished. Truthful advertising is not encouraged by promising the dishonest advertiser full pardon without punishment.

The greatest ally and servant of truthful advertising is the American press, which, as a whole, maintains an advertising censorship that protects the buying public against fraud and deception.

Sympathy seekers deserve much more than they get.

on Tuesday. Mrs. John Sommers and son Michael, of Main street, attended the Trenton Inter-State Fair.

Trappedly followed the efforts of Jerry and Constance to live their own lives without regard for convention or custom, and Jerry shouldered their troubles. She helped Constance, who having married a man who was a pick-up, was arrested as the wife of a thief and a possible accomplice. After Constance had been deserted by her husband, Jerry herself loved Tony, David's elder brother, but having brains as well as beauty, she resented his dishonorable approaches. He apologized and begged for another chance. But Jerry remembered his brother's treatment of Constance and repulsed him.

CHAPTER 17

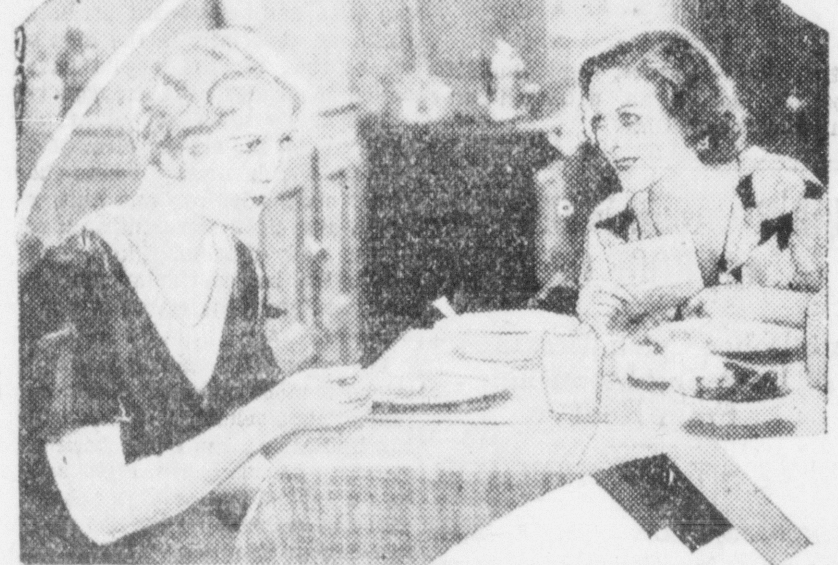

Once Around The Block

When she saw Constance sitting by the window in the twilight, her eyes fixed in their usual unseeing stare, her hands lying lax and pitiful in her lap, her frail shoulders drooping under their weight of misery, all doubts were settled for Jerry. Constance became the only reality, to bring Constance back to her old self, the most cherished desire.

"Lo, darling," she called cheerily. "Go for a walk today?" She noticed that Constance had set the table. After she had dumped her packages and the evening paper among the dishes, she picked up one small carton and began extracting its contents. "See, Connie, those little sweet pickles you're crazy about—Constance managed a wan smile and let Jerry pop the pickle into her mouth, but she took it out almost at once.

"Hurry up, Connie!" Jerry exhorted her. "Gotta eat fast tonight. Guess who's coming?"

As Constance lifted up her head, Jerry knew that she had made a mis-

"You see how it is, she's got rural on us" take. Her face had lost its usual brooding expression. It had become animated, anticipating. "Prince Charming in person," went on Jerry quickly, furious with herself for having roused Connie's hopes, "known to his intimates as Joseph Aloysius Munsey—"

"Oh—"

Jerry pretended not to see how all the eagerness was at once erased. "And guess who he's got with him? A brand new Ford—and a lot of ambition. He's going to learn to drive and he's picked up to help him. Snap into it, honey." Starting for the kitchenette, she picked up the packages and called back, "You dish out the pickles and the salad and I'll have the rest of the stuff ready in a sec."

Whatever efforts to interest herself in the proceedings Connie made were for Jerry's sake. For herself she would have set no tables and she hated the sight of food, even the sweet pickles which in the old days she used to gobble up. How far away those old days seemed now! She looked for some place to hide the pickle which Jerry had thrust into her mouth and which she could not eat. If she left it on her plate amid the other untouched food, Jerry would be hurt. Could she tear a piece off the inside of the newspaper and wrap up the pickle to throw in the garbage can when Jerry's back was turned?

She was unfolding the paper without so much as a glance at the headlines when her whole body suddenly became tense at one word that leapt out of the print—Jardine—Jardine! There was a picture, not David, a girl, "Evelyn Woodforth," the caption said. And underneath:

"Society Entertains Bride-to-be tonight at Jardine estate. The social season will be ushered in brilliantly tonight with a reception at Soundview, country estate of the Daniel Jardines, in honor of the coming marriage of Miss Evelyn Woodforth and Mr. David Jardine. By special arrangement, the Fifth Avenue Tatler, our society editor, will be on the air tonight at eight o'clock over Station WZR to give you his intimate comment on the doings and gowns of the elite."

With bloodless face and stricken eyes, she bent over the paper, following every word of the article. Every word pierced her brain, sharp as a needle.

"Everything's ready, hon," called Jerry from the kitchen. A moment later she came in, arms loaded with the warmed-over spaghetti, the bread and milk. Constance was emptying the carton of pickles into a dish. The paper had been thrown to one side. Constance did not speak, but silence was customary with her now. Jerry did all the talking with every ounce of pep and vim that she could muster.

"I'm hungry enough to eat shoe leather tonight—how about you? Draw up your chair, Connie, don't stand on ceremony in our little nest." Constance drew up her chair. She usually pecked at her food—another effort to please Jerry—but tonight she could not even make this pretense.

FARM SCHOOL ELEVEN
HAS FIFTY CANDIDATES

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 6.—With eight games scheduled for the 1930 gridiron season at National Farm School, Coach Samuel B. Samuels, and his husky squad of fifty candidates are busy right now preparing for the stiffest season in the history of the school.

Football is the major sport at Farm School. Gridiron teams turned out of the institution in the last ten years have been the talk of the scholastic and prep school circles of this section of the country. It is nothing unusual to see students training for the football season as early as July and August.

Last year Farm School played through an undefeated season, but the record for the past five years stands on a par with any prep school in the East. In five years a total of forty-three games have been played by Farm School football teams and only four games were lost during that period and two others tied.

Gridiron practice has been under way for several days but next week the real work and scrimmages will be daily routine for the Farmers.

No opening game has ever attracted so much attention here as the one scheduled by Farm School with Concordia Prep, of West Chester County, New York, a team that has won the district title for three years in West Chester county. Concordia is known as "the Bellefonte of New York." This game will be played on the Farm School gridiron on October 4. All games with the exception of the last two this year will be played on home territory.

Following Concordia Prep are the following games: Oct. 11, McKenzie Prep, of Monroe, N. Y., a team that last year held Farm School to a 7-6 score; Oct. 18, Susquehanna Junior Varsity, of Selinsgrove; Oct. 25, Temple Prep, of Philadelphia; Nov. 1, Drexel Junior Varsity, of Philadelphia, defeated last year by Farm School, 13 to 12; Nov. 8, Cooper Union College, of New York City, members of the Manhattan Collegiate League; Nov. 15, Wenonah Military Academy, away, a team that Farm School has not met for four years; Nov. 27, Williamson Trade School, away.

"We expect a hard season," Coach Samuels remarked today. "The opening game with Concordia will be a very difficult one and the boys know that Wenonah Military Academy will be pointed to as a tough struggle. All members of the squad are in excellent physical condition. The boys have been working on the school farms this year and are in shape to stand a hard schedule. That is why we have gone out of the way this year to schedule real football teams as opponents."

Farm School's backfield this year will average between 160 and 165 pounds while the line will average between 180 and 185 pounds.

"Phil" Kleinman, of New York, the backfield flash of last season, will captain the squad this year. Other backs include Elson, Cleveland; Caplan, Atlantic City; Jack Harmon, Germantown; Lazaro, Philadelphia; Jack Kaiser, Philadelphia.

EMILIE A. A. TO PLAY
TWILIGHT LEAGUE NINE

On Sunday Emilie A. A. will play a picked team from the Bristol Twilight League at Emilie's grounds. This team has been selected and is being managed by Ben Praul, one of the umpires of the League the past season, and who is well known to all the older fans as one of the best "southpaws" in this section 20 years ago.

Ben claims there are enough good ball players in the league to give Emilie a lacing. Many fans agree with him in this, while of course, Emilie's supporters are of a different opinion. However it should result in an interesting game.

Accepts Challenge

Editor, Courier.

Sir:—I see by the Courier where Mr. John Mulholland has challenged the Emilie A. A. for a series of games for the championship of the county. I can't see where Mr. Mulholland's team rates high enough to play in any series for the county championship, if there be any such thing. Emilie beat the Bristol A. A. rather easily, 13 to 4, earlier in the season, and I can't see that there has been much strength added to the team since. However, if Mr. Mulholland would care to, we could arrange a series of Saturday games between his team and our Junior Emilie team, which I think would be more satisfactory to everybody concerned. I would be only too glad to help in any way I could.

Manager, Emilie A. A.

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP

Thursday evening found Miss Christina MacMichael celebrating her twelfth birthday by giving a party. Many friends attended, among whom: Misses Mary MacMichael, Cassie MacMichael, Jeanne MacMichael, Marguerite Trivet, of Taylor avenue, Eddington; Walter Lewis, Robert Patterson and Walter Patterson.

On Wednesday evening thieves entered the home of William Potts, Taylor avenue, Eddington. The loot gained by the intruders amounted to about four hundred dollars worth of silverware and linens, also some other miscellaneous articles.

Mrs. Christopher MacMichael, of Taylor avenue, Eddington, entertained her brothers, Millard and Adrien Tilton, of Philadelphia, on Sunday.

Misses Mary and Cassie MacMichael and Miss Marguerite Trivet, of Taylor avenue, have entered in the woman's tournament of the Eddington golf course.

The Cornwells A. C. avenged the defeat they suffered at the hands of the Bristol Federals by trouncing the "Frogs" from Echo Beach by a lopsided score of 22 to 0.
